JBC | RISK DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

This Risk Disclosure Statement is issued by FGFC Markets Global Ltd (the "Company"), operating under the JBC trading brand. It highlights the principal risks associated with trading Contracts for Difference ("CFDs") and other leveraged financial instruments through the Company's trading Platform. It does not describe every possible risk and should be read together with the Client Agreement.

Trading in CFDs is highly speculative and involves a substantial risk of loss. Such trading is appropriate only for Clients who understand the financial, legal and other risks involved, possess sufficient knowledge of the relevant financial instruments and underlying markets, and can afford to lose their entire trading capital without affecting their financial circumstances or essential obligations. CFDs are derivative instruments whose value is linked to movements in underlying assets or markets, including currencies, shares, indices, commodities and other instruments offered by the Company. The Client does not generally acquire ownership of the underlying asset. Historical performance, market analysis and previous trading results do not guarantee future returns. The Company does not provide personalised investment advice or recommendations unless expressly agreed and permitted under its applicable authorisation. The Client is responsible for assessing whether CFD trading is suitable for their financial position, experience and investment objectives. Clients who do not fully understand the associated risks should obtain independent professional advice before trading.

Leverage and Margin Risk: Trading on Margin enables the Client to enter into positions exceeding the funds deposited, increasing the potential for both profits and losses. Adverse market movements may rapidly reduce the Client's equity and result in the closure of open positions. The Company may require additional Margin or close positions where applicable Margin requirements are not maintained, including without prior notice where permitted under the Client Trading Agreement.

Market and Execution Risk: Financial markets may experience sudden price movements, volatility, gaps and reduced liquidity. Orders, including stop-loss and stop-limit orders, may not be executed at the requested price or may not be executed at all. During exceptional market conditions, the Client may be unable to open, modify or close positions at the desired time or price.

Losses and Negative Balances: CFD trading may result in the loss of all funds allocated to the Trading Account. Where Negative Balance Protection is applicable, it shall operate in accordance with the Client Agreement and the Company's Trading Conditions.

Costs and Charges: Spreads, commissions, overnight financing charges, currency conversion costs and other applicable fees may reduce trading profits or increase losses. The Client should review the relevant Trading Conditions and charges before entering into any transaction.

Technology and Operational Risk: Trading through electronic systems involves risks arising from internet interruptions, technical failures, platform delays, inaccurate data, cybersecurity incidents and communication disruptions. Such events may prevent the timely submission, execution, modification or closure of orders.

The Client acknowledges that CFD trading may lead to significant losses within a short period and that no profit or investment return is guaranteed. By opening a trading Account or placing a transaction, the Client confirms that they understand the nature of the products and the risks involved, have considered their financial circumstances and voluntarily accept the risks associated with trading.
